

What the Employers/Companies Say.

This is from the source and these are the people that will decide your fate. Most large corporations have their own Human Resource (HR) division and have very sophisticated selection/recruitment systems.

Hot tips!

- Be prepared, understand the role and why you would be good in this position.
- Don't appear to be over-rehearsed or over-prepared.
- Think about the culture of our company and let us know why you have chosen us.
- Don't over-compensate, as in trying to look like a gun lawyer or a cynical journalist.
- Don't oversell yourself or your skills, because you will get caught out.
- Learn to communicate and talk effectively about yourself.
- Be a well rounded applicant, because we want more than the qualification.

Know what you have applied for and be on the ball.

- Do your research and know about the company, the industry and your area of interest. We expect that as a minimum.
- Use past experiences to back up and cement your statements.
- You may have great qualifications or a track record, but don't be arrogant about it.

Top 3 tips

- 1. Do your research!
- 2. Prepare yourself to do well.
- 3. Ask the relevant questions.

Good luck in your next interview, James E Lynch